HONGKONG, OCTOBER 6TH, 1877.

Our correspondent "Old Resident" has vigorously returned to the charge on the Blockade Question. He has, however, we are glad to observe, abandoned the position he took up in his provious letter, when he asserted that two-thirds of the opium imported into Hongkong was "exported in a contraband manner without paying any duty to the Chinese customs." We showed the utter impossibility of such a thing, and called for the figures on which the asser tion was based, "Old Resident," in his second letter, has favoured us with some statistics; but they full to do much toward strengthening his case. Before criticising his statements, however, we must frankly confess that in comparing Gibraltar with Hongkong we scarcely did justice to the extent of the trade of the former. Gibraltan being a free port, has become an entrepôt the trade between England and the Arabian states of Northern Africa, and this traffic has increased considerably of late years: The import trade is now nearly a third of that this Colony, but it is likely, according to the residents there engaged in commerce, to soon dwindle into something "utterly insignificant" if: the new regulations carried out. So at least says the memorial recently forwarded to the Home Government from the Gibraltar community protesting against Lord Carnarton's new policy. Some of the most influential London papers also adopt this view of the matter, and protest against the trade of a British port being sacrificed to please a Power whose commercial policy is most selfish and illiberal.

Turning to the figures which "Old Resident" furnishes in his last letter, we find he states that the total quantity of opium retained in this Colony for local consumption and for export by junk during the year 1876 was 17,338 chests, the bulk of which he insinuates is smuggled into China. We wi now supplement his statistics by more, also derived from the China Overland Trade Boport. In the year 187 there was imported into Hongkong 26,613 chests Patna, 10,820 chests Benares, 45,550 chests Malwa, and 1,599 chests Persian opium, making a total of $5,582 chests. Supposing, for the sake of argument, that three-fourths of the 17,338 chests retained in Hongkong for local consumption and export by junk were smuggled, how would this agree with "Old Resident's" first charge against the Colony that two-thirds of the opium imported was exported in a contraband manner? Surely this is a case of the engineer being letter to the Acting Colonial Secretary, praying "hoist with his own petard." "Old Residentaliantitutes a comparison between the export of opium to Canton and that to Swatow. During last year, he says, Canton only took 450 piculs, while Swatow imported 11,678 piculs. But this anomaly for elemency, and the unfortunate offender has is explainable. Swatow has become great distributing centre for opium, because the duties levied upon it at the barrier stations there are lighter than at No doubt, if the truth were known, a good deal of the opium sent Swatow finds its way overland almost as far south as Canton. Then again, and this fact goes a long way towards explaining the Donizetti's favourite opera Lucrezia Borgia, and the discrepancy-although the freight steamer to Canton from here is lower than | she proceeded to Frankfort, and thence to by junk, the natives can get the taxes commuted to such an extent, both on this and other dutiable articles, that they actually prefer to take delivery of it in Hongkong to having it delivered, freight paid, at Canton; and this we believe, although paying dues to the Hoppo's officers, is not included in the Chinese Customs returns. In fact, Canton Malle. Titiens, occupied a foremost position cannot be looked upon as a distributing centre for opium to any extent, the distribution for the West Coast and the south of very gravely of her case. Kwangtung taking place from Hongkong and Macao, from whence the drug is taken by junks to its various destinations, paying what dues ing its appearance in published statistics. and the careful watch kept by the revenue suppose that all, or even the greater the great difference. assistance; all they desire is liberty to continue to prey upon the trade of this Colony. Several Hoppos have grown fat upon the spoil of Hongkong, and they are more than content off with some booty. to allow matters to remain as they are. It is noticeable that the complaints do not come from thom. They are well able to protect their interests; it is the people of Hongkong who crave protection from a retem of organised piracy. "Old Resident" dwells with much emphasis rupon the fact that this island is the resort of the most lawless and desperate characters in Kwangtung, and insists Celestial Empire than in Hongkong. We. altogether demur to this. There are hosts of cities and towns in China whereforeigners are still liable to insult, and would doubtless be personally maltreated, but for the fear of consequences. Our correspondent, moreover. considerably exaggerates the danger to which foreigners are exposed in their walks abroad in this Colony. He also, to our thinking, traces it in great measure to a wrong cause. It is the most natural thing in the world that Chinese outlaws should seek a refuge here from the vengeance of the law of their country; it is equally natural that the thieves of Canton should flock to a port where there is more wealth and where they. 1875. So that the quantity unaccounted for are not so well known. The fault certainly should read thus :-does not lie in the British laws or policy; it is the logical and inevitable result of the occuliar position of the island. The application of Lord Carnaryon's new regulations for the conduct of trade in Gibraltar to Hongkong would certainly not relieve the Colony of the rescals who infest it. Their business is not so much to smuggle as to Smuggling requires capital, which the Chinese vagabonds referred to do not man who appropriates with the greatest nonchalance the high sounding title of " Philanthropist." Whether the writer may be considered by his personal acquaintances to merit the appellation of "Philanthropist" or not, it is of course impossible to say, but it is evident he could not consistently sign himself "Modesty." This egotistical individual generously places on record, presumably for the benefit of Hongkong and in defence of Governor HENNESSY's policy, his views on the administration of justice and the system of gaol discipline in this Colony. The former he considers a scandal and a disgrace, and in relation to the latter he says that "the present system of locking men up. and bullying them, and ill-treating them, has confessedly broken down, whether viewed as a protection to society, or as a means of reclaiming the criminals themselves." The panacea he proposes for this most lamentable state of affairs is to appoint a missionary to be superintendent of the gaol. "From all self-righteousness good Lord deliver us." Would this gentleman of the cloth also like to see his brethren assembled in our courts of justice, gravely discussing say the construction to be placed on a disputed contract, in order that the administration of justice may no longer be a scandal and a disgrace? To undertake the government of the gaol he says, "would be no departure from the road a missionary had marked out himself when he came to China. Really it would be a noble career to embark in and if the man had sense, honesty, and energy, there would be every prospect of his doing both a great and a good work." "Save us from our friends" must be the heartfelt prayer of Governor HENNESSY and all the missionaries, if "Philanthropist" is to be looked on as a friend.

In connection with our suggestion anent the prisoner Rozario, late in the employ of the Hongkong and Whampon Dock Company, at the present time undergoing his term of imprisonment in the gool, we now hear that Mr. A. The reformation of the criminal classes is one of the leading problems of the day. and in Hongkong there would be ample means of testing new theories by experiment. No finer field for missionary labour is open in China. Even a theorist could at worst do little harm, for the present system of locking men up, and bullying them, and ill-treating them, has confessedly broken down, whather viewed as a the oriminals themselves; and as the prisoners would be chiefly heathers, it would be no departure from the road a missionary had market out for himself when he came to China. Really i would be anoble career to embark-in, and if the manhad sense honesty, and energy, there would be every prespect of his doing both a great and a other member of our community, however, was thing beautifully clean and shining, and fat and be able, perhaps, to aid people to understand the cheerful prisoners quoting texts and touching readers of your journal will heartily laugh, im- at both prison and those connected with it. He to deny, that this is the plan which has been must look on the prison as his worship, or as the mill in passing through which the dirty filthy rags of wickedness are to be bleached and purikeep a jinricksha to employ instead of the coolie fied, ground down, and all their obstinacy torn out of them; turned inside out, and at last brought to the pulp of humility, pressed into shaps till they issue forth useful paper. And with the majority of criminals there is no reason from three causes, namely, I-Casual temptation; best treated as privately as possible, the apprehenimmediately remitted. 2. Want and necessity which can be cured by no punishment, but wh can be reclaimed and be made useful members of society by being taught, and given-for th teaching is not sufficient—the mean of making an honest and respectable living. And three natural rufflanism, from early education and lonassociation with criminal companions, for which sharp punishment at the outset, followed by long and careful treatment, is necessary; and though too often this class is to be dismissed as incurable those you do reclaim become shining lights by the force of their previously ill-directed energies. A oriminal is of course irritating and annoying, but it is absurd to hate him. Cholera and small pox are irritating and annoying, but if we want to stamp them out it is no use losing one's temper and swearing at them. You have to make the condition of the patient's body suc that the disease cannot continue to exist; and so with the criminal, you have to model the man so that crime cannot exist in connection with him: The rubbish of our system is that we have one remedy only—punishment. like the old medical panacea of bleeding. For petty theft you give a man a year's misery; for robbery five years misery; and if, nevertheless, nature > triumphs and he does reform, you think the But I will not prolong remarks which I fear, from the tone of the comments that have been made upon Mr. Honnessy's proceedings, will hardly coincide with the popular view: I have ventured to write so much because the subject is one of especial interest in China, where the native good discipline is probably the worst in the world. And if out of the present spitation some system should be evolved, which shall tend to the wiser treatment of criminals, without foolishly relaxing the safe-guards necessary for maintaining neace and social order an excellent. example will have been shown, and much good will have been done.

THE REVOLT IN TRANSCAUCASIA

The Times correspondent with the Russia rmy writing from Okoum on the 23rd August says:—A proclamation in Ochemchiri, signed with the name of one Ressin Effendi. Chief of the Staff of 200th (sic) Division, was found atecupied. It states that the writer was for six vears military attaché at St. Petersburg: that the Turks came to Abkhasis, not simply to make the inhabitants of Abkhasia revolt, but more because they wished to show to Europe, where the Museulman foith was in reality to be found The writer of the document then proceeds to take exception to some of the doings of the Russians, and calls them barbarians against whom the forces of Europe ought to be directed The special charges of which the writer says That the Russians have burnt all the paried, and eventually burnt them. 4-That the Rossians have no prisoner having killed all the wounded whom they took. Now, since all these so-called atrouties are stated to have been perpetrated in Abkhasia, where I have instituted a diligent inquiry, I may better the true state of the case. First as to burning the villages. No one denies, or wishes adopted in Abkhasia for punishing the natives who have refused submission. The practice of burning and piliaging is one on which the minds of all men are not in accord. Where art treasures the Tuilleries, such a course approaches yancommitted at the fromer place I felt a deep sorroy that our army could ever have committed such an act. But here in Abkhasia the case is widely lifferent, and it may be argued that it is not only the most ready, but a just way of punishing insurponts. Next, as to firing on the hospitals. should like to have the opportunity of asking Mr. Ressin Effendi what stops were taken to make he position of the hospitals known to the Russians. Thirdly, as to leaving the Turkish dead unburied and burning them. The statement is true but requires explanation. The Russian camp at Illori, and the Turkish one at Ochemchiri, are both on the coast, separated by a distance of three mile: the Russians being established on the left (south) bank of the River Geleza. Both sides of the river are wooded, and the Turks, though their camp was three miles off, used to advance in the forest and shoot across the river, at a distance of 200 or 300 yards After the battle of the 27th of June there were a number of Turkish dead on the north right) bank of the river. The quastion which leave for others to settle is-"Whose duty was it to hary those deed?" Norther side did so, and on the fourth day the steach was so inclerable that the Russians placed dry wood over the corpses, and they were burnt. Linstly, as to killing the wounded. No concealment is made of the fact that the rebels are shot or bayoneted man prisoner; he was not wounded; and I not know that he had really been concerned the revolt, and his freedom was given to him on the 23rd of July at Okoum, so that the instrucions were conformed with to have no prisoners. Nor are there any Turkish prisoners, wounder or not, in the Russian camps in Abkhasia. have, however, made certain that there is Turkish prisoner at Sugdidi, in hospital. has six bullet wounds. It is only just add that some of the Russian soldiers them. selves do not like the idea of killing the wounded. ENERGY AND PHYSIQUE.

These are persons of a nervous temperament who seem to be always upon wires. Nature has given them energy; but their physique is in many cases inudequate to supply the demands made upon it. The steam from Alma Mater, separated as she then was is there, but the boiler is too weak. Duke d'Alva, according to Fuller, must have been of this nature. "He was one of a lean body and visage, as if his eager soul, biting for partridges; nor were his dangeliters disinanger at the clog of his body; desired to fret a passage through it." The same thought he exclaimed; "Why, look there, at Jeffrey; for the members of a reading party. They were live in, what sort of house to have, what and there is my little friend ____, who has received with open arms into the society, such furniture, how many servants, what o'clock not body enough to cover his mind decently with; his intellect is improperly exposed."
